

"Reorienting Indian Agriculture: Challenges and Opportunities" by Dr. Raj S. Paroda

The book titled, "Reorienting Indian Agriculture: Challenges and Opportunities" by Dr Raj S. Paroda, was published about a year back by CABI, London. This book nicely covers the journey from green to an evergreen revolution. It also suggests the need for reorientation of Indian agriculture, which is critical to address emerging challenges. It focuses on global agriculture, genetic resource management, crop breeding (including biotechnology), seed production technology, agronomy, innovative extension, motivation of youth (including women), climate change and policy reforms for improving farmers' income. This Book has received excellent reviews from many eminent agricultural experts from all over the world. (Book Reviews)

Considering the importance of this Book and its demand by the students, teachers, scientists and policymakers, the CABI has decided, as an exception, to include the Book in open access category and even reduced the price of hard copies by half. (CABI Letter)

CABI Flyer publicising open access of the Book, providing OA icon, for downloading the PDF version. (Flyer).
